COLLEGE OF BUSINESS
2013–14 Annual Report

“A Tradition of Excellence”
The John L. Grove College of Business at Shippensburg University provides a high-quality and high-value comprehensive educational experience that prepares students to excel as principled leaders in today’s global business community.
For nearly forty-five years, Shippensburg University’s John L. Grove College of Business has centered on its students, quality, value, and professionalism. This focus, along with the dedication of our faculty, administrators, and staff, embodies the mission of our college—to provide a quality, high value, comprehensive education that prepares students to excel as leaders in today’s global business community. We provide exceptional undergraduate and graduate programs that are taught by highly qualified faculty in small classroom settings, allowing students to take advantage of countless academic and practical experiences.

Shippensburg has prepared generations of students in business education for nearly eighty years. The Grove College of Business has awarded degrees for nearly forty-five years and has proudly held the prestigious international accreditation by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) for more than thirty-three years.

Grove graduates continue to succeed in their careers, despite below normal economic growth. Students gain real-world experience through internships that successfully place them in positions based on their academic background and interests. The Grove College Office of Internships has been proudly offering internship opportunities for more than forty years.

The college also works closely with the university’s Career Center to prepare students for internship and job placement. The college’s annual career exhibit is highly attended by employers seeking students for internships and employment. Twenty different business organizations offer students on-campus leadership opportunities. We also believe that the college’s highly engaged advisory board has been instrumental in developing strategies to continually enhance our student’s professional and academic preparedness. Strong academic programs, application of business theories, student/faculty research opportunities, and involvement outside the classroom also have helped more than 88 percent of business alumni to obtain full-time employment in their major or related field within six months of graduation.

Grove College boasts successful alumni across the globe. I believe their success comes from the excellent education they receive from our faculty. Parents also validate student success, because they continue to send their sons and daughters to Ship and believe in our mission to prepare global leaders. Employers continue to seek our graduates because they are well prepared, ethical, and professional.

We are fortunate to be ranked among the top AACSB-accredited undergraduate business programs by the 2014 US News & World Report. Our graduate program also is ranked by Princeton Review as one of the top 296 AACSB accredited graduate programs. Enrollment in the Professional, Emerging Leaders, and Online MBA programs has reached more than 230.

This year’s annual report covers the success of the Investment Management Program (IMP) in managing more than $100,000 of funds, Investment Club, Business Plan Competition, the American Marketing Association, the Accounting Club VITA program, the success of the Shippensburg’s Human Resource Management (SHRM) chapter, and the achievements of Shippensburg’s Enactus Club. Also, faculty received twelve awards during the 2013-14 academic year for their accomplishments in teaching, research, and service made possible through generous donations.

This year’s success and progress are due to the efforts and dedication of many excellent people in Grove College. I hope you are as proud of our students, faculty, alumni, and supporters featured in this annual report as I am.

Best Regards,
John G. Kooti, Dean

Shippensburg University is a regional state-supported institution that is one of fourteen universities in the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education. The university offers one hundred undergraduate programs and fifty-seven graduate programs in three colleges: Arts and Sciences, Business, and Education and Human Services. The university enrolls more than 7,800 undergraduate and graduate students.

The 200-acre campus located in Cumberland County was founded in 1871 as the Cumberland Valley State Normal School. Its first class graduated in 1874.

The Office of Professional, Continuing and Distance Education Studies provides credit and non-credit programs to meet the educational and training needs of the region, conveniently offering courses online and at multiple locations.

Shippensburg University is accredited by the Middle States Commission on Higher Education, AACSB International, ABET, American Chemical Society, Council on Social Work Education, Council for the Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs, International Association of Counseling Services, Council for Exceptional Children, and by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.
Nora Habig is a firm proponent of state school systems of higher education. Although she didn’t attend one of Pennsylvania’s fourteen state schools, the native New Yorker did graduate from The University at Albany, State University of New York. “Education is important, and I’m glad I went to college. From where I sit today, I understand why it’s important to get a good education.”

Habig is the group manager in commercial banking at M&T Bank in Carlisle. She works with mid-sized businesses in Cumberland and Franklin counties and the Pittsburgh market.

She first joined the Grove College Advisory Board in 2007. A former board member recommended her to Dr. Steve Holoviak, then-dean, saying she would be an asset to the board. She hasn’t disappointed.

Over the past year, Habig described the board’s activities as “invigorating.” Recently, she was a key player in organizing subcommittees that allowed board members to take a more active role in the college. The three subcommittees focus on the objectives of Grove College—engaging students, retaining students, and improving the overall student experience.

While faculty strengthens the classroom experience, Habig said the board will work on developing “soft skills” with students. She stresses that students should focus on discipline, hard work, and creating a solid network.

“The people you get to know are very important. You have to take the opportunity to build your network.”

She also encourages students to contact people in the field they want to enter to determine how they can get involved. “If I were to do something different, I would’ve done that sooner.” As the advisory board continues to rebuild, Habig looks forward to what lies ahead.
Brad Hollinger ’76 graduated with a degree in marketing and finance. He is chair, founder, and chief executive officer of Vibra Healthcare, LLC in Mechanicsburg and is responsible for strategic direction, operational execution, and profitability.

Vibra was founded in 2004 and operates more than fifty specialty acute care hospitals that deliver either long-term acute critical care or acute inpatient medical rehabilitation. Hollinger also is founder and CEO of The Hollinger Group, a senior care company with seventeen facilities in six states.

Prior to founding Vibra Healthcare, he co-founded and served as Chair and CEO of Balanced Care Corporation. In addition, he served as chief development officer and executive vice president of the contract services group of Continental Medical Systems, a NYSE $1.5 billion dollar company.

Hollinger has participated in Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Central Pennsylvania and has served on the board of directors for the past ten years.

Rob Jones ’88 is managing director and head of US and European Conduits for RBC Capital Markets. Jones runs RBC’s non-Canadian conduit efforts, including the asset backed commercial paper conduit businesses in the US and Europe.

This business includes three multi-seller ABCP vehicles (Old Line Funding, Thunder Bay Funding, and White Point Funding) with aggregate commitments approaching $22 billion. He manages a group of more than twenty-five based internationally. He has been with RBC since 2001. Jones has worked in the asset backed conduit business for the past twenty-five years.

Prior to joining RBC, Jones was managing director and head of the conduit business at JP Morgan. He worked at JPM for fifteen years and was associated with the conduit business since JPM’s first conduit launched in 1990. He has a strong track record executing some of the most complex structured transactions over several decades of direct transactional ABS experience.

Bill Rodruan ’76 is the CFO at Clair Global. Previously, he had a thirty-seven year career with Armstrong World Industries, starting just two weeks after graduating from Shippensburg with a BSBA in Management Science.

At Armstrong, he had many different responsibilities, including within his last fourteen years the positions of the chief accounting officer and interim CFO for the company and vice-president finance for the Worldwide Flooring organization. He retired from Armstrong in May 2013.

While working for Armstrong, he completed the Advanced Management Program at Wharton in 2004. He is married and lives in Lititz.

Two national publications recognized Grove College as a top business school last fall.

The Princeton Review named Grove College to its list of “The Best 295 Business Schools.” According to Robert Franek, The Princeton Review senior vice president-publisher, “We recommend Grove College as one of the best institutions a student could attend to earn a business school degree. We chose the schools we profile in this book based on our high regard for their academic programs and our reviews of institutional data we collect from the schools. We also solicit and greatly respect the opinions of students attending these schools.”

An eighty-question survey asked business school students about their school’s academics, student body, and campus life as well as about themselves and their career plans.

The publication does not rank the schools on a single hierarchical list or name one business school best overall. Institutions were rated in five categories: academic experience, admissions selectivity, careers, how interesting professors are, and accessibility of professors.

This honor came on the heels of the college once again receiving recognition from US News & World Report in its “Best Undergraduate Business Programs” category. The college was ranked 342 out of 681 undergraduate programs accredited by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business. The ranking was determined in a survey last spring of deans and senior faculty at all AACSB accredited undergraduate business programs.

In addition, US News recognized the college in its 2014 “Best Online Business Programs” ranking: Grove’s online program ranked 131st, tying with six other institutions. Nearly 1,000 distance education programs completed a survey as part of the process. According to the publication, all rankings include peer review data based on schools’ evaluations of each other. The rankings include student engagement, admissions selectivity, peer reputation, faculty credentials and training, and student services and technology.
SPOTLIGHT ON RETIREES
TUCKER AND BARD

Dr. Joanne Tucker is looking forward to the next chapter of her life, but she will miss all that makes Shippensburg University special.

“I will miss everything. I will miss all the friends I made among the staff and faculty. I will miss the students.”

Tucker retired in May after twelve years as associate professor in the Department of Finance and Supply Chain Management.

She holds bachelor’s, master’s, and doctoral degrees from the University of North Texas. She was a full-time lecturer at the University of Texas in Arlington for twenty years, then taught at Millersville University before coming to Ship.

Although the university has grown, she said “it has managed to retain its personality, small classes, and academic reputation.”

“I think Shippensburg is the best-managed university in the PASSHE system,” she said. “I’ve seen presidents and deans come and go, but the place continues to run like a clock. I attribute this to the very dedicated people who do the everyday work, plus faculty who feel loyal to the institution.”

Tucker taught undergraduate classes in business statistics, operations, and supply chain management as well as graduate courses in supply chain management. Her field has been transformed by the “megatrends” of globalization and technology since she first started teaching, she said.

“It always has been about managing more and more products through fewer intermediaries. But businesspeople have figured out how to dramatically increase economies of scale and efficiency at the same time, and this has resulted in more goods available to consumers at a lower relative price than ever before.”

Tucker plans to stay busy in retirement. She loves to garden, wants to learn to make quilts and other textiles, and hopes to teach part time if an opportunity arises.

Tucker and her husband, Dr. Victor Massad, an associate professor of business administration at Kutztown University, live in Elizabethtown. She has two sons, William and Caleb, and a stepdaughter, Monica.

When Jill Bard started working as secretary for the Department of Finance and Supply Chain Management at Shippensburg in 1980, the institution was not yet a university.

Bard witnessed many changes during her nearly thirty-four years here, including the change from Shippensburg State College to university, new technology, and campus growth. She retired in May after nearly thirty-eight years in the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education.

“The duties of a department secretary are wide ranging. To name just a few things, we complete a variety of work for faculty, and we assist students with scheduling and other questions or concerns they might have. We keep the office running.”

While Grove College has been in Grove Hall since the building opened in 1937, Bard’s first office was in Shippensburg Hall. “I was happy to see an IBM typewriter on my desk. Times certainly have changed,” she said.

Bard, who holds an associate’s degree from Central Penn Business School (now Central Penn College), said she has fond memories of her years at Shippensburg. Now, however, she is ready for a change of her own. “Ship provides a great environment to work in. I enjoyed working with the friendly faculty, administration, staff, and student body throughout my career. I will miss my Ship family, but I am looking forward to a more relaxing schedule.”

“I think Shippensburg is the best-managed university in the PASSHE system. ...I’ve seen presidents and deans come and go, but the place continues to run like a clock.”

ETIQUETTE DINNER

The Grove College of Business offers two Etiquette Dinners to the students each year. Both dinners featured guest speakers Lynne and John Breil of The Professional Edge. The Breils have a longstanding relationship with the university that provides an outstanding experience to students, faculty, and staff.

The dinner and presentation explained the importance of proper dining whether at a job interview, business meeting, or in other professional settings. The Breils discussed the proper way to dine—from simply offering left and passing right to the difficulty of operating a pair of chopsticks. The menu included dishes that should not typically be ordered when in a professional setting, such as spaghetti or French onion soup, and explained why those foods are inappropriate.

The Breils also discussed etiquette abroad, explaining why students must be willing to accept food in other cultures.

The first Etiquette Dinner was sponsored by Northwestern Mutual Financial Network in November 2013 and was open to all business students. Approximately 100 students attended. The Grove College of Business extends their sincere gratitude for Northwestern Mutual’s continued support of such a rewarding experience for our students!

The second dinner was in March 2014 and was geared toward accounting majors. Students had an opportunity to network with the accounting firms attending. Special thanks to the following firms who made this event a success: Arthur Bell; Boyer & Ritter; Ernst & Young, LLP; McKonly & Asbury; PwC; Reinsel Kuntz Lesher; SF & Company; Squire Lemkin & Co.; BDO; CliftonLarsonAllen; Herbein & Company; ParenteBeard; Rager, Lehman, & Houck; Rotz & Stonesifer; and Smith Elliott Kearns & Company.

Beta Gamma Sigma is an international business honors society that represents the top 10 percent of students in AACSB-accredited colleges and universities. To be considered for membership, students must attend a university or college accredited by AACSB International, must be a senior in the top 10 percent of their class with a minimum 3.4 cumulative GPA; or a junior ranking in the top 7 percent of their class with a minimum 3.5 GPA. MBA students must maintain a minimum 3.6 GPA.

This year, the Shippensburg chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma sent two student representatives, Dylan Bensinger and Danielle Prior, to the fall 2013 Student Leadership Forum in Tampa, Florida. The students found that this unique event provided more than an average business conference. They participated in a variety of workshops that strengthened their leadership styles and taught other styles of leadership by being a teammate. Participants also strengthened their communication skills through creative group activities. One of the most rewarding aspects of the conference was the opportunity to meet and interact with peers from around the world.

In May, Beta Gamma Sigma held its annual induction ceremony and College of Business Awards Banquet. This year, forty-one members were inducted in the society, and numerous faculty members were honored for their contributions in their fields of study. The new officers of the Beta Gamma Sigma Chapter at the university also were recognized for the upcoming school year.

TOP HONORS AT STATE SYSTEM COMPETITION

Three student projects nabbed top honors at the third annual Pennsylvania’s State System of Higher Education Student Business Plan Competition last spring.

A team of three Ship students who developed and successfully began marketing an all-natural fly repellent for horses won first place. Oak Hill Farm Naturals, created by Dustin Lowry of Shippeensburg and Daniel Machlanski and Chris Goldy, both of Cranford, New Jersey, and originally from Poland, combined focused marketing with a high level of customer service to gain recognition in the local markets and achieve profitability in the first year of operation. Their product is an alternative to chemical sprays, which can have a negative impact not only on the horses, but also on their human owners and handlers and the environment. The spray is targeted for horses that are ridden for recreational purposes as well as those that participate in equestrian competitions.

Lowry, Machlanski, and Goldy received a $10,000 prize to further develop their business plan. The first-place prize was donated by event sponsor, Pennsylvania State Employees Credit Union (PSECU).

Noah Kline of Mechanicsburg and Zach Britcher of Stewarts-town, took second place with their development of new recreational facility management software. “Reccelerator” is a scalable, cloud-based management system that supports university recreation departments and facilities with membership, equipment tracking, and analytical reporting for active members and employees. Internal data can be collected and submitted through mobile applications for fast, convenient reporting requiring nothing but a web browser. Further development will open the software up to club sports teams as well intramurals and fitness classes.

Justin Grosz of Greentown won the Student Choice award for his proposal, “Help Just in Time,” a personalized online tutoring service that provides information via e-mail, video, or live-feed tutoring. Students can purchase the service per question, page, or session, or buy a subscription.

DARE THE DEAN AND SPRING SOCIAL

To raise money for Susan G. Komen for the Cure, the university’s American Marketing Association (AMA) dared Dr. John Kooti, dean of Grove College, to color his hair pink and walk around campus for a day. The goal was to raise more than $500, with half of the donations benefiting Komen for the Cure and half benefiting AMA. Thanks to generous donations from faculty, staff, and students the AMA exceeded their goal, raising $544. Kooti graciously sported hot pink hair to the College of Business Spring Social in May. To watch the fun, visit www.darelicious.com/dares/details/166/dare-the-dean#.

Fastenal Inc. sponsored the Grove College of Business social. Their generous donation of refreshments were appreciated along with the “Catch the Ship Spirit” sunglasses. Fastenal representatives also joined the faculty/staff kickball team (left) in competition against the students, but the students took home the trophy. Students enjoyed Goose Bros. Ice Cream and other snacks provided by Grove College. A big thank you to Fastenal for sponsoring the social!
ACCOUNTING CLUB

During this past academic year, students in the Accounting Club participated in networking events and meetings with guest speakers.

The club hosted a variety of speakers from regional and Big 4 accounting firms, along with a variety of private accounting positions. Represented firms included PwC, Smith Elliot Kearns & Company, BDO, ParenteBeard, Boyer & Ritter, and Financial Outsourcing Solutions.

The club also held Public Accounting Night and an etiquette dinner that allowed students to network and seek full-time and internship positions.

Public Accounting Night hosted nineteen public accounting firms. Students submitted their resume for a resume booklet that was distributed to each participating firm. Students were able to personally connect with firms and exchange information for internships and full-time employment.

The etiquette dinner included sixteen public accounting firms and guest speakers Lynne and John Breil of The Professional Edge Inc. The Breils discussed how students should conduct themselves during a meal in a business setting. Students also were able to network with firms before, during, and after the event.

Along with informational and networking opportunities, the club operates a Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program that provides students with practical and volunteer experience. This program trains students in individual income tax preparation and provides them with tax preparation software. Under the supervision of an advisor, the group met twice a week to provide local citizens the opportunity to have their income taxes prepared.

Club advisors are Dr. Mary Myers and Dr. Scott Cairns. The 2013-14 officers were Zach Arzt, president; Kenny McHugh, vice president; Tyler Lucchese, treasurer; Justin Peterman, membership director; Jessica Hughes, secretary; and Josue Santoyo, webmaster. The 2014-15 officers are Jessica Hughes and Nicole Simensky, co-presidents; Spencer Haines, vice president; Justin Schneider, jr. vice president; Matthew Hoffman treasurer; Brooke Reeser, membership director; Kayla Brelej, secretary; and Jennifer Bankert and Kelsey Mccabe, webmasters.

AMA

Ship’s chapter of the American Marketing Association (AMA) attended the annual AMA conference in New Orleans last April. More than 1,300 students attended from 190 colleges and universities in the United States, Canada, and Puerto Rico.

The conference included speakers, networking sessions, and opportunities for students from other AMA chapters to interact. Speakers represented companies such as Facebook, Hershey Company, Coca-Cola, Converse Digital, and Wix.com. Presentation topics included finding the invisible job, the Hershey way of marketing, and what it takes to get a job.

Seniors Ryan Sexton and Tyler Geib participated in a marketing strategy competition that gave them twenty minutes to develop a strategy for a product that they then presented to judges. Several students also participated in a Role Playing and Relationship Selling Certificate.

Before returning to Shippensburg, students attended the French Quarter Festival, which included local music, street performers, vendors, and artists. The event provided an opportunity to experience both business and fun along the Mississippi River.

DECA

DECA (Distributive Education Clubs of America) worked on several entrepreneurship projects this past year, including an attempt to

ALPHA KAPPA PSI

Alpha Kappa Psi (AKP) participated in several community service activities this past year. Twice a year, AKP members contribute to the Adopt-a-Highway program (top left) by cleaning up a 1.6-mile stretch of I-81. Several members also participated in the university’s Relay for Life to raise money for the American Cancer Society. (Bottom left) Members Shawn Cheng, Spencer Haines, Todd Hayes, and Matthew Darkow dressed in women’s clothing for Miss Relay to raise money for cancer research during the event.

In February, the Xi Tau chapter of AKP attended the Principled Business Leadership Institute in Philadelphia. The two-day event included AKP members from across the country who attend professional presentations. The institute allows participants to build their professional knowledge, bond with each other, and network with CEOs, business owners, and other AKP members.

AKP also worked with the university’s Career Center to present the Professional Pathways to Success Conference for students and alumni. The conference featured keynote speaker Christopher Jackson ’97, a Q&A session facilitated by AKP members, and other panels with speakers.

Last spring, AKP held an event to recognize business students on the Dean’s List. More than fifty students attended, as well as faculty from the college.

AKP also helped Grove College host its third annual spring social. Sponsors Fastenal and Goose Brothers Ice Cream supplied refreshments. The social featured a volleyball tournament and kickball game between students and faculty. The event provided a great way for students to destress during finals week.
launch a social media marketing company and a new food brand.

DECA members developed a new product called the Raider Rag. They also held the second annual Spring Expo, which invited entrepreneurs to rent tables to sell their products on campus.

Members participated in open houses and launched their first Finance for Food project, which collected monetary and food donations for Kings Kettle Food Bank. DECA also participated in the Target case competition and the first Ship Tank pitch competition.

The organization has officially become a part of DECA international and participated in its first international DECA conference. A group of students wrote a business plan and pitched their business “Rebottled” to attract investors at the DECA conference. The group developed, marketed, and sold products for profit.

The organization continues to give students real-life business experience and helps them grow as entrepreneurs and business professionals.

INVESTMENT CLUB

This past spring, Ship’s Investment Club sent four members to the three-day Quinnipiac GAME forum in New York City. Students included Michael Uehlein, Sarah Hansen, Michael Kuder, and Michael Cornell.

Students networked with more than 1,000 participants from 130 universities that represented forty-four states and forty-three countries. Presentation topics included the global economy, alternative assets, corporate governance, and global markets. Several breakout sessions allowed students to choose topics that appealed to them, such as when it’s time to buy or sell stocks.

The club valued the experience and plans to send a group to future conferences.

PHI BETA LAMBDA

Phi Beta Lambda sent ten members to the State Leadership Conference in Gettysburg this past spring.

The conference provided opportunities to network with students from other colleges across Pennsylvania, attend workshops, and compete in events that helped to develop leadership skills. Workshops included topics on true colors, personal branding, and behavioral based interviewing.

Keynote speaker Debbie Lestitian, chief administrative officer for the City of Pittsburgh, discussed hurdles that she faced in her twenty years of experience in law, finance, and public service.

Ship students competed in individual and team events, such as job interviewing, entrepreneurship concepts, emerging business issues, and business ethics. Steve Reilly, a junior management and marketing major, and Bobby Steger, a junior accounting major, received third place in the business ethics event. Kathleen Rooker, a junior management and marketing major, received second place in the entrepreneurship concepts event, which made her eligible to attend nationals in Nashville, Tennessee this past summer.

TOASTMASTERS

Ship Toastmasters met weekly to help students improve their communication and leadership skills.

The organization created a comedy night program encouraging students to be confident in their public speaking skills by using humor. Members also participated in Ship Tank, Pathways to Success, the Career Expo, and the Dean Student Advisory Council. The organization hopes to create more programs and participate in other community service projects with its new board members, along with continuing to help students to develop their confidence and speaking skills.

BEAUTIFUL BOTTLES

Sophomores (from left) Brady Udovich, Evan Landauer, and Zach Dolan with Dr. John Kooti celebrate the success of their new venture Rebottled. The business repurposes old liquor and beer bottles as decorative home goods. Products include handmade mugs, vases, and shot glasses, with plans for self-watering planters. The students participated in Grove College’s first Ship Tank competition, a play off ABC’s Shark Tank.
During the annual Redefining Investment Strategy Education (RISE) Conference in Dayton, Ohio, students from Ship’s Investment Management Program finished sixth with their project in the core investment style category. The conference included experts on panels ranging from economics to finance as well as breakout and networking sessions. Students saw how information from the conference related to their coursework and they appreciated the insight from featured speakers.

Lyons has been a member of the Accounting Club, a student member of the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants (PICPA), and served on the Microcomputer Lab Advisory Committee. She was recognized as the PICPA Outstanding Senior by the Grove College Accounting Department this year. She also participated in the Grove College of Business Advisory Board, Open House events, and represented the business college on Admitted Students Day to discuss the benefits of attending the university with prospective students. Lyons also is a work-study student in the Microcomputer Labs on campus, helping her peers with computer and printer issues.

Lyons has completed three internships including a financial claims analysis internship at Highmark Inc., an underwriting/account installation internship at United Concordia, and an auditing internship with KPMG, LLP.

She is a member of Beta Gamma Sigma and the recipient of the Dr. William Knerr APSCUF/SU John L. Grove College of Business Student Award.

Lyons recently was honored as a Capital One Academic All-American and became a two-time first team selection for the PSAC All-conference softball team.

She enjoys spending time with her family and friends, especially at the beach. She loves to stay active and play sports with her younger cousins. Next year, she will attend graduate school to complete her fifth and final year at Shippensburg before beginning the CPA exam in the summer of 2015.

As a motivated undergraduate, Joshua Rudley has taken advantage of plenty of opportunities at Ship and has even created some new ones.

Rudley is a triple major in entrepreneurship, marketing, and management and quickly got involved by working with the Entrepreneurship Leadership Center and Small Business Development Center on campus. He helped to create and run programs such as the Dream Share Project and a competition based off the TV show Shark Tank, which he called “Ship Tank.”

As a freshman, he founded the entrepreneurship club, which named E-BOSS, and later converted it into an international DECA chapter. While servicing as DECA’s founder and president, he created many entrepreneurial projects and worked with local small businesses to assist in their marketing and operations. Through DECA, he also created an annual Spring Expo, Finance for Food project for local Kings Kettle Food Bank and developed and sold a new Ship product called the “Raider Rag.”

Rudley also founded a Ship Toastmasters chapter based off of Toastmasters International to assist students in public speaking and leadership. He was president for the SU Jewish Student Organization/Hillel and vice president of the Student Alumni Ambassadors.

As a senior, he was vice president of advertising on the American Marketing Association (AMA) board. He led a group of members to a case competition at John Hopkins University to compete against AMA chapters including John Hopkins, Carnegie Melon, University of Pittsburgh, and Slippery Rock. His team won first prize after pitching their recommendations to the president of the company. He is proud that the company implemented many of his recommendations after the competition.

Rudley has led five student organizations and completed five internships, two of which he created. He was the first Ship student from Ship to study abroad in Israel at the University of Haifa.
“By far this is the best decision in my life!” As crazy as this sounds, I uttered this statement while studying abroad in France through my current study abroad program in the United States. It sounds a little bit complicated, but I will explain. I am already an international student from Venezuela and decided I wanted another experience abroad, and I decided on France. I had the opportunity to study from January through May in La Rochelle, France. This amazing city is a beautiful seaport on the Atlantic Ocean. La Rochelle has so much history behind it going as far back as the tenth century. Throughout the centuries, La Rochelle became one of the most important harbors in relation with Great Britain and other Northern European countries. For this reason The University of La Rochelle has an École supérieure de commerce (La Rochelle Business School) that is an internationally recognized business school. Being an international business major with a minor in French, I had a chance to interact with students from everywhere in the world in the same class and at the same time improve my French skills. While there, I also was able to meet professors with great knowledge on international relations, which helped me understand things from different points of view.

The majority of my classes were focused on globalization and international relations. These classes gave me a new perspective on how students from Europe see the world in a different way than American students do. I had the chance to make hundreds of new friends, which I think is the purpose of these study abroad programs; we still keep in touch to see if we can meet again in the next few years. My group in La Rochelle was 100 percent international; every weekend there was either a trip somewhere in France or a short walk to the local beach just to hang out. There was always something new to do. There also was a club soccer team that I was a part of, which ended up champions of the soccer league in the province of La Charente Maritime, which is the equivalent to a state in the United States.

“The culture in La Rochelle is about wine, cheese, and rugby. I had the great opportunity to watch the rugby team Stade Rochelais win against their rivals, become the league champions, and ascend to the top rugby league in France. La Rochelle is located in the middle of France on the western coast very close to Bordeaux, a well-known wine city in the world. Traveling to Europe was without a doubt my best decision, because everything is close and traveling is extremely easy. At the end of my program, I visited countries I never thought I would ever see. For example, I spent time in Croatia, Lithuania, Slovenia, Netherlands, Belgium, Spain, England, and a few others. Thanks to the friends I made, I was able to stay at their homes in these countries as well as experience daily life in those places.

I would recommend to every student to study abroad while here at Ship. If I could go back in time, I would do it over and over again. Seeing the world is amazing and a unique experience. I would also like to thank the business program and their partnerships with multiple universities in the world for making this whole thing possible. I hope to go back someday to La Rochelle and meet with my friends again. I promise anyone who chooses to study abroad will say the same thing I did just a short time ago: “By far this is the best decision in my life!”

PBL LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

This past summer, junior Kathleen Rooker represented Ship at the Phi Beta Lambda (PBL) National Leadership Conference in Nashville, Tennessee. She was eligible to attend after winning second place at the state conference for the Entrepreneurship Concepts event.

Held at the Gaylord Opryland Resort and Convention Center, Rooker again competed in her event against students from colleges all over the country. She also attended workshops, donated and participated in the March of Dimes March for Babies, and was a voting delegate for Shippensburg University. Rooker said the highlight of the conference was listening to keynote speaker Johan Kahlilian and his message to be conscious of what your actions say about you. Workshops included topics such as “How to Dress for Success” and “Start Small, Finish Big,” which was presented by Sylvester Chisom, one of the authors of The Young Entrepreneur’s Guide to Success.

PBL is the largest student business organization in the world at the post-secondary level. Rooker has been a member since 2013. She hopes to apply what she learned from the conference to her experiences at Ship. She also will stress PBL opportunities to other students to illustrate how vast and varied the organization is.
STUDY ABROAD IN AARHUS

By Brooke Clippinger

I cannot express enough how important my time abroad was to me. I was fortunate to spend January through June 2014 studying at Aarhus University School of Business in Aarhus, Denmark. The John L. Grove College of Business has an exchange program established with a number of highly accredited business institutions around the world. I chose Denmark because it is not a very well known country, and I had the opportunity to be immersed in a culture that was similar, yet very different than the United States.

Studying abroad has allowed me not only to appreciate what I have been blessed with by growing up in America, but it also opened my eyes to how other people and cultures operate. Often it is difficult to see exactly how our culture functions without leaving it for a while and experiencing a new one. While in Denmark, my studies focused on international management and international labor economics. I also took courses in Danish culture and language. The courses taught me to be more open and conscious of the cultural differences that surround me on a day-to-day basis. By learning to be culturally aware, I was better able to adapt my behavior and accommodate local norms on a universal level, as well as on an organizational and business level in Denmark and while traveling to neighboring countries.

Even though nearly every Dane speaks English, the Danish language barrier and cultural norms that I had to adapt to proved to be a lot more difficult than I had assumed. Every day was a new adventure that was completely different from my life at home. While living abroad I had to learn to live independently, being solely responsible for the decisions I made, creating a sense of self-discipline that I never had to pay attention to before. With this independence also came a new sense of freedom. My first trip outside of Denmark was in March 2014 when I booked a flight alone to Austria only two days before the flight departed. Once I was there, I realized I didn’t speak a word of German and had to adapt to yet another type of culture and lifestyle. In total, I was fortunate to travel to nine other countries outside of Denmark including Germany, Italy, France, Ireland, Latvia, and Sweden. There is no question that upon returning home, I feel more confident in adjusting to situations where misunderstandings, differences, and social/cultural barriers are present.

Studying abroad is what students like myself would describe as an amazing and “life-changing” experience. Not only did I have an amazing time, but I developed skills and knowledge through certain experiences abroad that no other situation could teach me. These lessons that I learned are what made my time abroad so life changing. I was forced to face my own personal fears, overcome language and cultural barriers, look at the world around me from a different view, and develop awareness that can translate back into everyday functions of life.

STUDENT AWARDS

Write to Ship, Dakota C. Bricker received the Provost’s Award for his research, Social Responsibility in Family Friendly Businesses. Bricker received a check for $100. Zachary Duvall received the Editor’s Choice Third Place Award for his research, Ethical Decision Making in Corporate Leaders.

AMA TAKES FIRST PLACE

Ship’s chapter of the American Marketing Association (AMA) earned first place at the AMA Regional Conference hosted by Johns Hopkins University in November. Team members included Ryan Sexton, Shelby Stachel, Maria Bush, Josh Rudley, Tyler Geib, Zach Duvall, and Alyssa Denis.

“The competition is another testament to the ability of our students to compete with the best and excel. I am very proud of their accomplishments,” said Dr. Joohn Kooti, dean.

Ship students competed against teams from Johns Hopkins, University of Maryland, University of Pittsburgh, Slippery Rock University, and Carnegie Mellon University.

Each team created a ten-minute presentation about a start-up company called MindSumo. By solving challenges, students proved their skills to companies looking for interns and entry-level hires, and also earned cash prizes for submitting top ideas. The presentation included a SWOT analysis, recommendations on how to improve the company, and social media strategies to share the company’s website and its content with college students.

Ship’s AMA chapter creates meaningful, engaging, and rewarding opportunities for students by providing marketing projects, case competitions, conferences, guest speakers, and fundraising projects.

In the 2014 edition of Write to Ship, Dakota C. Bricker received the Provost’s Award for his research, Social Responsibility in Family Friendly Businesses. Bricker received a check for $100. Zachary Duvall received the Editor’s Choice Third Place Award for his research, Ethical Decision Making in Corporate Leaders.

WORDS FROM AN EXPERT

Dr. John Kooti, dean, and Dr. Sarah Bryant welcomed Stephen Creskoff (center), a leading expert on trade facilitation problems in developing countries, as a guest speaker last fall. He presented “Your Wonderful International Business Career (Whether You’re Ready For It or Not): My Accidental Career in International Law and Business.”
The Internship Office in the John L. Grove College of Business provides a variety of services to students such as career consultation, internships, and networking opportunities with employers. The office is a valuable resource for business students who strive to make themselves as marketable as possible in a competitive job market.

While the office is the focal point for these efforts, the message and goals are shared by all faculty, staff, and administrators in the Grove College of Business. Everyone works to ensure that the idea of personal marketability includes gaining resume enhancing, real-world experience and achieving personal networking opportunities.

Those opportunities are not geographically limited, as our students have gained experiences on local, regional, national, and global platforms. As part of the college’s efforts to broaden student experiential learning, students are strongly encouraged to study abroad. They often return from their travels with a new perspective that has changed them personally and academically, which will prove beneficial in their future careers.

One key aspect of international study is that students better understand the need to compete on a global level. Such experiences provide them with additional skills and talents to meet those new challenges.

As an AACSB-accredited college of business, Grove College provides students with a challenging curriculum led by outstanding faculty who continually enhance their own skills, enabling faculty to more fully prepare their students for the business world. Students also can take advantage of many co-curricular opportunities, such as volunteer service, leadership positions in campus organizations, and, most importantly, individual internships.

The Grove College Internship Office is fortunate to have strong connections and partnerships with employers throughout the region. The majority of internship opportunities are in the south-central and eastern Pennsylvania regions, but a unique relationship has broadened those opportunities to a global level.

In 2011, Volvo Construction Equipment (Volvo CE) moved its North American headquarters from Ashville, North Caroline, to Shippensburg. This $100 million investment meant that the firm’s production, technology, and sales and marketing operations are located near the university. That move was important for Volvo and has resulted in exciting opportunities for our business students who want to be involved with a global manufacturing leader.

The Volvo Group is one of the world’s leading manufacturers of trucks, buses, construction equipment, and marine and industrial engines. It also provides complete solutions for financing and service. The Volvo Group, which employs about 115,000 people overall, has production facilities in nineteen countries and sells its products in more than 190 markets.

The Shippensburg site has approximately 1,000 employees representing nearly twenty nationalities in operations, technology, sales and marketing, and customer support. The facility manufactures soil and asphalt compactors, motor graders, pavers and screeds, wheel loaders, and milling machines. Operations also include welding, large machining, paint, and assembly. Last June, the Volvo CE Customer Center opened for dealer events and conferences, site events, and allowed customers to test the Volvo machinery in a simulation site.

Such a major facility in our area provides a wealth of resources and opportunities for students. Due to the proximity of the facility, students can take advantage of internships during the summer as well as throughout the spring and fall semesters. This allows students who are not local to gain valuable experiences during the academic year.

Grove College is thankful to Volvo CE leadership and management for their efforts to reach out to our students and provide these opportunities. Since the move, more than sixty business students have completed an internship for credit. In addition, approximately forty students completed an internship without requesting credit.

Volvo is by far the largest local employer of our students for internships in manufacturing. These internships cover the gamut of programs, including human resources, accounting and finance, management and marketing, and supply chain management.

As both Volvo and Grove College grow and advance, we anticipate an increase in internship opportunities. In addition, this has resulted in many internships becoming full-time employment for our students. Volvo CE and Shippensburg University have formed a partnership that can serve as a model for other employers and universities.

Tim Eastland ’13 (left), an MIS major, interned at Volvo CE as a student under Matthew Perry ’99. Perry started as an intern at Volvo fifteen years ago and now works with Grove College of Business to recruit student interns.

MIS CAREER FAIR

The MIS Club’s biannual Career Fair last spring was a great success. More than sixty students from MIS and other majors attended the fair at the CUB to pursue internship and job opportunities. Students also met with representatives from multiple technology organizations who participated in the event.

For more than forty years, our Business Internship Program has provided students with the opportunity to gain valuable practical and professional experience in their field of study. An internship survey of upperclassmen in the John L. Grove College of Business estimates that more than 65 percent of students (approximately 700) participated in an internship during the 2013-14 academic year. Grove College of Business students can receive academic credit for their internships. Following is a list of business students who have completed an internship for credit this past academic year:

GUEST SPEAKER

TRAVELING TO TURKEY

Last May, Dr. Sarah K. Bryant attended the International Trade and Finance Association Conference in Kayseri, Turkey. She presented a paper, co-authored with Dr. Irma L. Hunt, titled “Developed or Developing? Regional Economies within Countries.” While in Turkey, Bryant toured the Cappadocia area to understand how people have lived over the past 8,000 years. In the background are caves dug in volcanic ash.
Several Grove College of Business graduates were recognized for work in their field and dedication to the community.

HEIGES AWARD

Brian Heckler ’84 of Evanston, Illinois, earned a degree in accounting. He is a partner in the Chicago office of KPMG LLP and was recently appointed as the National Advisory Industry Leader for the Diversified Industrial segment, overseeing a portfolio of more than 300 national clients. He also is a member of the US Transactions Services Leadership Team at the firm, focusing on accounting and reporting consultation to clients on mergers, acquisitions, initial public offerings, restatements, joint ventures, and divestitures. He served a two year Professional Accounting Fellowship within the Office of the Chief Accountant in the US Securities Exchange Commission. In addition, he serves or has served on various community and civic organizations, including the Joffrey Ballet in Chicago and as a board member of the Children’s Play Room Inc. in Harrisburg, which is a child abuse prevention organization. He also received the university’s Outstanding Young Alumnus Award.

LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT

Steven Renner ’70 of Littlestown graduated with degrees in accounting and management and spent eight years in public accounting. In 1978, he joined Gettysburg Hospital as the senior financial officer for the organization, and in late 1992, he became president. In that position, he played a key role in developing a merger agreement with York Health System. In 1999, Gettysburg and York hospitals became Wellspan Health System, which has been recognized regionally and nationally as a state-of-the-art integrated health system. From 1999 until his retirement in 2003, he remained CEO of Gettysburg Hospital while also serving as senior vice president of Wellspan Health, the parent company of both hospitals. He then became president of the Adams County Economic Development Corporation, a post he held for four years. In November, 2011 he was elected to a four-year term as the first Adams County controller.

OUTSTANDING YOUNG ALUMNI

Randal Rhoade ’93 of Palmyra, graduated with a degree in business administration and began his career in Harrisburg with the Pennsylvania State Treasury. He then worked for various nonprofit service agencies around the world. He is currently assistant country director-finance and administration in Laos for CARE, a leading humanitarian organization fighting global poverty. He served several years in the Peace Corps in West Africa followed by work as office manager for Hospital Albert Schweitzer in Haiti, then serving as finance and administrative specialist and country director for Habitat for Humanity. His other positions have included working with Action Against Hunger and the American Refugee Committee in various countries, including the Dominican Republic of the Congo, Chad, and Kenya. While working in South Sudan operations, he and two colleagues were taken hostage by rebel groups and held for three months in the Somali desert.

Mario R. McDonald ’97 of Breinigsville, was a marketing major and is senior director with Quintiles Consulting, the largest provider of biopharmaceutical development and commercial outsourcing services in the world. As a student, she was a four-year letter winner on the basketball team, playing on the NCAA Division II national runner-up team before she earned her degree in marketing. She has a master’s degree in career and technical education from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. She began her career as a specialty territory sales representative for Eli Lilly & Company before joining Clarkston Consulting where she worked for ten years and became a client service provider. She joined Quintiles in 2011. She has led consulting projects both domestically and abroad, published numerous articles, and presented at professional conferences. She serves on the Healthcare Businesswomen’s Association (HBA) Greater Philadelphia chapter’s board of directors as the chapter’s president-elect. She also serves on Quintiles’s Win Women Inspired Network Leadership Team and received HBA’s 2013 ACE Award, which was created to recognize corporations’ efforts to strengthen the Advancement, Commitment, and Engagement (ACE) of women’s careers in the healthcare industry. She also was selected from 18,000 women in the company to receive the 2014 HBA Rising Star award.

Richard Dietz ’99 of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, is a partner with Kilpatrick Townsend & Stockton LLP. He earned his degree in finance and was president of Ship’s Honors program. He earned his law degree in 2002 from Wake Forest University School of Law where he was number one in his class. He served as law clerk for judges in the US District Court for the Western District of Virginia and the US Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. From 2004 to 2006, he was a research scholar in comparative law at Kyushu University in Japan. From 2006 to 2008, he was an associate at Covington & Burling LLP in Washington, DC. He joined his current firm as an associate in 2008 and was appointed in 2013 as a partner. His practice is focused on appellate and constitutional litigation, and he has represented clients in dozens of cases in state and federal appellate courts across the country including the US Supreme Court. In 2012 and 2013, he was recognized as a North Carolina “Rising Star” in the area of Appellate Law by North Carolina Super Lawyers magazine. He is a gubernatorial appointee to the North Carolina Courts of Appellate Law by North Carolina Super Lawyers magazine. He is a gubernatorial appointee to the North Carolina Courts Commission and is a member of the Ethics and Grievance Committee for the Twenty-first Judicial District Bar.

earned his US Army commission and began serving as a helicopter medical evacuation pilot for more than nine years. He transferred in 2005 to the US Coast Guard to serve as a search and rescue pilot. In 2011, while serving with the Coast Guard in Puerto Rico, he was selected to serve on an exchange tour to fly search and rescue with the British Royal Navy. Since then, he has participated in more than thirty search and rescues resulting in the saving of dozens of lives. His career has included roles as an instructor pilot and flight examiner, communications division head, engineering officer, maintenance test pilot, flight platoon leader, and flight scheduler. He has flown throughout the world in areas including South Korea, Thailand, Dominican Republic, and the Bahamas. He has completed numerous training programs, including the Advanced Helicopter Rescues Swimmer School. He has earned numerous awards and honors including the Army Meritorious Service Medal and the Coast Guard Accommodation Medal.

William Craig ’00 of Harrisburg, is founder and CEO of WebpageFX, an award-winning full-service Internet marketing, web design, and web development agency. He initially began his Internet career on a freelance basis as a Ship student. After graduating with a degree in finance, he earned an information technology master’s degree from the University of Pittsburgh. While working as a defense contractor with the Pennsylvania National Guard, he continued to pursue his dream of starting his own business, culminating with the incorporation of WebpageFX in 2006, to meet what he predicted would be a massive growth in Internet marketing. He started working full time at the company in 2004. The firm has since expanded to more than sixty employees, including a number of Ship alumni, and continues to add jobs. He was named Entrepreneur of the Year at the 2010 Harrisburg Chamber Business Awards. He is a board member and active participant in Harrisburg Area Community Colleges’ Institute for Entrepreneurial Studies and also is involved in various programs such as the Ben Franklin Technology Partner program. He also is an active member in Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

COB EVENTS

Housed within Shippensburg University’s John L. Grove College of Business is a Small Business Development Center (SBDC) that serves Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, and York counties. It is part of the Pennsylvania Network of Small Business Development Centers (PASBDC), which was founded in 1980.

The Pennsylvania SBDCs play a unique and vital role in the Commonwealth’s economic development initiatives by working with entrepreneurs in all stages of business:

- from pre-venture to start-up to growth
- offering a comprehensive portfolio of business assistance services
- working with companies in all industry sectors
- providing access to the expertise and resources of Pennsylvania’s universities
- participating as a member of Pennsylvania Department of Community and Economic Development’s Partnerships for Regional Economic Performance; and
- maintaining an accredited membership with the Association of Small Business Development Centers as part of a national network of more than 1,000 centers.

The service philosophy of the SBDC is “to help build the management capacity of entrepreneurs and small business owners through providing education, guidance, feedback, information, and technical assistance.” SBDC services are strategic in nature, with the goal of helping clients assure their long-term success.

In addition to our general management consulting, the PASBDC network also provides specialized programs to support our clients’ business development needs. The Shippensburg SBDC hosts a consultant for the Environmental Management Assistance Program, a specialized service focused on assisting businesses with environmental compliance and regulatory issues. Specialists from other centers are accessed as needed for client issues within our region.

The SBDC provides opportunities for campus and community members, including:

Applied Student Learning—internships and student work opportunities that allow students to actively engage with business consultants and entrepreneurs where they help address real-world business challenges and pursue market opportunities. The SBDC also works directly with student entrepreneurs, assisting them in business planning and development activities.

Classroom Contributions—SBDC staff provide presentations and technical assistance to students in courses focused on entrepreneurial or small business development topics.

Community Outreach—the SBDC works out of outreach offices in the four counties it serves, maintaining collaborative relationships with economic development organizations, banks, chambers of commerce, legislators, and other stakeholders.

Research Opportunities—the SBDC engages in significant market research projects on the behalf of clients, including university students and staff, utilizing current industry and demographic databases to assist entrepreneurs in making data based business decisions.

The university provides funding, technical support, and facilities for the SBDC with additional funding provided by our program partners: the US Small Business Administration and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The Shippensburg SBDC also received supplemental funding during the program year from the Small Business Jobs Act of 2010, the Economic Development Administration, and the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection.

2013-14 Regional Activities

The Shippensburg SBDC participated in several activities last year, including:

- Economic Development Administration, Business Continuity Project—provided business assistance to small firms in Pennsylvania impacted by Hurricane Irene and Tropical Storm Lee
- Affordable Care Act—addressed challenging business issues and provided educational events on requirements of the ACA for small businesses
- Entrepreneurs’ Day in South-central Pennsylvania—in conjunction with Ben Franklin Technology Partners and the World Trade Center of South-central Pennsylvania, provided presentations and assistance from technology companies
- Center for Employment, Education, and Entrepreneurial Development Initiative—supported entrepreneurs through workshops and one-on-one assistance
- PCN “Town Meetings on Financial Literacy”—participated in town meeting on “Starting a Small Business”
- The Economic Development Course in Pennsylvania—presented on a panel about “Small Business and Entrepreneurship.”
- Legislative Relations—interacted with legislators to sustain and increase awareness of SBDC services
- Sam’s Club Outreach—partnered with York SCORE Chapter 441 and Sam’s Club of York to provide on-site programs and technical assistance to members

Awards and Recognitions

Also last year, the PASBDC named Shippensburg’s Robin Burtner as the 2014 State Star for her contributions to Shippensburg’s SBDC program.
