SU Honors Program Newsletter Wins National Award

The Shippensburg University Honors Program has received an award in the 2013 national Honors newsletter contest, sponsored by the National Collegiate Honors Council (NCHC), the national professional organization of Honors Programs and Colleges. The SU Honors newsletter, The Honors Chronicle, won first place in the electronic, student-published newsletter category.

Megan Fick, a senior early childhood education major from Greensburg, PA, and Hannah Brant, a senior early childhood education major from Greencastle, PA, are the student editors of The Honors Chronicle. Fick and Brant will accept the newsletter award on behalf of the SU Honors Program at the annual NCHC Conference in New Orleans, Louisiana on November 9, 2013. “I am very excited that The Honors Chronicle took first place in the national newsletter contest,” said Fick. “This recognition reflects all the hard work Hannah, the Media Committee, and I put into each issue we publish.”

The nation-wide competition is open to all Honors Programs and Colleges affiliated with NCHC. Awards were also presented in print and staff-published newsletter categories. The award recipients are selected by NCHC Publications Board.
