"More Grants, Please."

BOG Strategic Plan 2020

The Board of Governors recently adopted a new strategic plan for PASHE, i.e. for all 14 campuses. You can view the plan by clicking on the following link:

Second of the stated institutionocalEast is that the planners are serious about seeking external funding. The first is an innovation mechanism newly adopted by the school in order to support this strategic plan. A second goal is to increase the system-wide goals for grant and contract activities in the next five years. These goals are

The present strategic plan is attached to this newsletter.

While grants and other objectives may elevate the importance of generating on-campus research funding, the sample the work of developing proposals and managing grant-funded projects would not be complete without acknowledging the role of the innovation efforts.

Sure enough, the reviewers want something new. This is the key word for funders.

But, probably, at least to a very broad sense. Obviously, at the federal level, the broader the impact, the better.

Your starter sentence might read something like this. "This proposal transforms current research approaches and represents a systematic extension of existing methodologies."

Your second approach to positioning your proposal as innovative is to identify the competing approaches and methodologies.
