

Welcome to Shippensburg University. This is one of a series of podcasts I and others at Ship will be doing to offer you some information about this great institution.

When you drive or walk around campus you see that we are doing a number of renovation and construction projects. These many projects are important to the university's future and important to the academic and support services we offer our students.

Our new student fitness center is open and I encourage everyone to stop by. Nearby, work is underway on a major renovation and expansion of Reisner Dining Hall. When completed next year, the facility will be one of the best of its type in the nation with additional seating and even better food options.

Dauphin Humanities Center and its new addition will open this summer and we expect it to become a hub of academic and student activities. In addition to serving as the site for many classes in the College of Arts and Sciences, it also offers the chance for students to meet to formally and informally, and for students to meet with faculty members.

We're also excited about planned work on the Ceddia Union Building and Lehman Library in which those two important buildings will be physically linked to provide a living-learning atmosphere that enhances the best features of both buildings.

This and other planned work is part of our master facilities plan and part of our plans to enhance the unique opportunities and experiences at Shippensburg. Thanks for listening and please contact me if you have a question.
